POLITICAL NOTES

—A special election is to be held in the Michigan Fifth Congressional district, November 4, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the late Wilder D. Foster. The Grand Rapids Democrat predicts that "party" will have little to do in the selection of his successor.

—Among the queer results of the election, this year, are the election of Republican candidates for the Legislature in Fayette and Greene, and of Democratic candidates in Delaware and Mercer. If we had been asked to pick any four counties in the State in which such results might be regarded as impossible, these would have been the very counties we would have chosen.

—A general review of the Connecticut town elections shows that the Republicans have obtained control of eighty-three towns, and in nineteen others they have equal power with their opponents. The Democrats carried sixty-three towns and the Independents one. The Republicans elect 259 selectmen, the Democrats 255, the Liberals 8, and the Independents 6, Of the town clerks the Republicans have 93, the Democrats 68, the Liberals 2, and the Independents 4.

—It seems probable that the ultimate result of the failure to harmonize the warring factions of Apollo Hall and Tammany, will be that the former will form a junction with the Liberal Republicans on the New York city and county offices, and by this means prevent the election of the Tammany candidates. The Apollos claim to be able to cast twenty-five thousand votes. The Republicans, under these circumstances, would seem to have an easy victory before them.

—The friends of the regular Republican county ticket in Huntingdon have fought a hard, but successful fight. Last year the county gave Hartranft only 550 majority; and this year, although they have had to fight against a formidable looking bolt, got up in the interest of a troublesome and persistent faction, they have given the State ticket 700 majority, and elected their county ticket triumphantly, in spite of the bolt, and of the third ticket run in its behalf. Now that this factional fight has been fought out, we may reasonably anticipate that we have seen and heard the last of it. The bolters staked their all on the independent

—The Springfield, Mass., Republican thus summarizes: "From Donnybrook Fair, plus bowie knives and six shooters, Arkansas politics have been mysteriously transformed into a love feast. It beats Ovid. The legal proceedings against Governor Baxter have been abandoned, the truculent Chief Justice has drawn in his judicial horns, the Little Rock Republican, like Anacreon's lyre, murmurs nothing but love, the militia have been mustered out, and everybody is fraternizing with everybody—Radical lions and Conservative lambs getting up joint stock siestas in a really millennial fashion. Powell Clayton himself is quoted as saying that the time has now come for reconciliation, good feeling, and good government; that the people of Arkansas should leave off quarreling, and begin developing the vast resources of their State."

—A contemporary thinks there couldn't have been a panic under "good old Democratic" sway. Well, from March 4, 1829, to March 4, 1841—twelve years—Domocrats were in the White House, Jackson eight and Van Buren four years. But the crash of 1837 came, all the same. From March 4, 1853, to March 4, 1861, there were Democratic Presidents—Pierce followed by Buchanan—but there was a financial panic in 1857 that not many persons have forgotten. The truth is, neither Democratic nor Republican Administrations have thus far been able to avert panics, though those since 1860 have been less disastrous than former ones, because, unlike 1857, the currency did not go to the "demnition bow-wows." In 1857 everybody wanted to trade off the currency for swamp lots, big "yaller" dogs, gourdseeds, or anything else that could be eaten or tilled. Now, everybody clamors for greenbacks.

THE ELECTION AND ITS RESULTS.

The election is over and we must admit that the Republican party of Centre County has not covered itself with glory and honor. A certain portion of the republican party allowed Levi A. Miller to be the nominee of the party for the legislature without so much as raising a hand against it, and then allowed every one to suppose that he was at least to receive a pretty general support, and finally slaughtered him unmercifully. We ask these would-be republicans is there any principle in such a course? Why did men go into the republican convention and support Mr. Miller for the nomination and then work and vote against him on election day? Did these men stop to think that Mr. Miller was a poor man, that he has others dependent upon him for support, and that such action on their part was cruel, aye, worse than that, was wicked? Before the convention met we opposed the nomination of Miller because we did not believe he could receive the unanimous support of the party, and had we been acquainted with him we would have urged him to refuse the honor; but we were not very well acquainted with him, and he kept away from us. He was influenced and controlled by men who thought they carried the republican party in their pockets, and when they found out their mistake some ducked their heads immediately, and others in their rage voted against men on the ticket who did have some show of success, thereby, (to use an odd expression,) cutting off their noses to spite their face.

Since the election Mr. Miller has shown himself to be a much better man than many gave him credit, for he bears his defeat like a man and urges his friends all over the county to forget the past, and in the future (as far as they have the power) to bring the republican party up to the work with solid unbroken front, to fight for the glorious principles of republicanism; for, says he, it is principles and not men after all that we are fighting for. Mr. Miller, notwithstanding his disastrous defeat, is a stronger man to-day than he was on the day when he received the unanimous support of the republicans of Centre County in convention assembled.

And who defeated John Irwin, Jr., for the Senate? Centre County gave him more than her party vote; Huntingdon, to which before the election all eyes had been anxiously turned, stood up to the work nobly, giving Irwin an increased majority; but the Mifflin and Juniata republicans proved traitors and openly bolted the nomination. There was no excuse for this. The fitness of Mr. Irwin for the position nobody, not even his opponents, called in question. These renagade republicans of Mifflin and Juniata may yet have to take a dose of their own medicine. Much as we might regret such a course it will be but natural for the bolters in this county to remember and pay their respects in the future to the bolters of Juniata and Mifflin. Although these birds of a feather would not exactly co-operate together, yet the result to the party would be about the same and brought about by similar causes.

Although we are gratified at the result of the election of a republican commissioner, yet we do not regard it as altogether a republican triumph. It was rather an earnest protest of the tax-payers of the county against the wire pulling ring here in Bellefonte, and the corruption, imbecility and unfaithfulness of the present board of commissioners; against the misappropriation of the people's money for the establishment of papers to be devoted to the interest of any clique or ring; the starting of Brown's Republican to be supported and sustained by ring patronage, disgusted every honest tax-payer, and that together with the great personal popularity of our candidate, Mr. Gramly, secured his election, notwithstanding the lies that were industriously circulated and sworn to in order to secure his defeat. All honor to the honest men on the other side of the mountain who gave such very efficient aid in support of honesty and purity in the administration of our county affairs. Mr. Gramly is an honest and capable man, and they will never have cause to regret the step they have taken.

We have but one more word to say. We asserted before the election that if every republican would turn out we should carry our whole county ticket. The result verifies the truth of that prediction, so that after all the republicans have themselves alone to blame for defeat. This is but a poor comment on public intelligence. That men who bear on their shoulders the responsibility of choosing their public officers and of carrying on the government should deliberately abandon the exercise of their duties, and leave the result to the blindest of chances, is astonishing. Such negligence is criminal, and in this county at least has brought us a humiliating defeat, where if we had done our whole duty we might now have been enjoying the satisfaction of a glorious victory. We hope republicans will bear this in mind and try and do better in the future.

STATE ELECTION.

The election in this state passed over quietly and as every one expected no doubt, the entire republican ticket was elected by heavy majorities. Thousands of republicans stayed away from the polls, therefore we have not them to thank for the success of the right. Mackey runs ahead of the ticket and will receive from 35,000 to 40,000 majority, and Gordon from 15,000 to 20,000. The official returns come in slowly, but it is only a question of majorities. We have gained over last year several members of the legislature, and also several senators. There has been some queer voting; some democratic counties have turned a complete somersault, and some republican counties ditto. It would seem as if the people had taken it into their heads to seek out men without regard to party at all. The election in Ohio is very close, but we have no doubt but that Allen (Dem.) is elected governor by a small majority. The balance of the state officers elected are republicans.

The republicans have carried Iowa, electing the entire state ticket by 35,000 majority.

In Oregon the Democrats have elected their congressman.

In all these states there was great apathy shown and a light vote polled.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

[Correspondence of the REPUBLICAN.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 17, 1873.

THE PRESIDENT'S VIEWS ON THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Newspaper comments, favorable and unfavorable, upon the views of President Grant on the financial situation are now the order of the day. They are mostly favorable. Indeed the President's reputation for having some considerable acquaintance with economic laws is growing, notwithstanding the adverse criticism of a few rather able journalists.

The particular point touched upon by the President which has received the greatest amount of unfavorable criticism is concerning what is usually termed the "forty-four millions reserve." But this is attributable to the fact that his critics do not understand him. I have it on the most reliable authority that he did not mean to be understood as saying what has been attributed to him. He does not favor an expansion of the volume of the currency. Neither does he think it wise to contract it. When he stated that were he "now writing his annual message to Congress he would recommend legislation clearly granting the authority to issue the forty-four millions reserve" he never once thought of recommending that the amount of currency to remain permanently in circulation should be increased from $356,000,000, to $400,000,000. His idea is that the forty-four millions should continue to be a reserve (not permanently a part of the circulation) in the Treasury to meet the necessities of the country.

To those who are wilfully obtuse it is difficult to explain just what President Grant did mean. It is well known, however, that he has all along regarded this forty-four millions as such a reserve, and that, too, in accordance with the provisions of existing laws. Only in cases of extreme emergency would he advise a resort to the same, however clear the authority of law for doing so might be. But he finds that his opinion on this point of law is questioned by many persons, some of whom are persons of ability and considerable legal experience. He would therefore ask Congress to make more clear the provisions of that law which he now believes to exist. He believes he now has the authority to regard this forty-four millions as "money in the Treasury," (so he wrote a couple of weeks ago) but while there is the least possible difference of opinion as to his power in the premises he feels that he would like to have the controversy set at rest by a resolution of Congress "clearly granting the authority."

His recommendations concerning the establishment of a free banking system are likely to meet with approval throughout the West. His plan is a simple one. It is merely extending the privilege of instituting national banks to any and all persons who will furnish the same security to bill-holders that is furnished by national banks now in opperation. These national banks are required to deposit in the Treasury of United States bonds and in return receive their circulating notes; ninety dollars for every hundred in bonds deposited. But under the present laws the amount of national bank circulation is limited. He would simply remove all restriction as to the amount and allow any body to engage in banking who would deposit the necessary bonds. The objection to the proposition is that the amount of currency thus put in circulation might exceed the demands of business and that this would cause the circulation to depreciate in value. It is an objection well worthy of serious reflection. I freely confess myself to be of the number of those who believe that this matter will naturally regulate itself, that the amount of the circulation will naturally adjust itself to the wants of the country better than can be done by any arbitrary enactment. But this is too big a question to be disposed of in one brief letter.

THE FOREIGN DELEGATES TO THE EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE VISIT WASHINGTON.

While the Evangelical Alliance was in session in New York, an invitation was extended to the foreign delegates to visit Washington. They accepted the invitation and came to this city last Tuesday, accompanied by a number of the most distinguished American members of the Alliance. They were met at the depot by the Reception Committee and other prominent citizens, who conducted them to coaches that were in waiting to convey them to Willard's Hotel. As they passed up the Avenue their cars were greeted by the chimes of the Metropolitan Church which pealed an anthem of welcome to the strangers. At the hotel the formal ceremony of welcome took place. Short addresses were delivered by one of the pastors of the city and by Governor Shepherd, after which they proceeded to the White House to be presented to the President. The presentation took place in the Blue room where the President and his cabinet were awaiting them, accompanied by their wives. Rev. Dr. Tiffany, pastor of the Metropolitan Church, addressed a few words to the President explanatory to the object of the Alliance, and presented those present to him. The Dean of Canterbury led in prayer, after which the President welcomed the delegation in his own brief manner in the following words: "It affords me great pleasure to welcome you, gentlemen of the Evangelical Alliance, to the Capital of the United States, a country where are being worked out problems affecting all nations of the world." The delegates were then introduced to the President, one by one, by Geo. H. Stuart, Esq., of Philadelphia. Some of them returned their salutations in rather peculiar ways, according to the manners of the countries from which they came. Very brief remarks were made by some of the delegates and the company withdrew, very favorably impressed with the President and his reception of them. In the evening large audiances gathered in four different churches to listen to the eloquent speakers who had been requested to deliver addresses. It was quite a novel pleasure to hear in succession gentlemen from England, Ireland, Scotland, Italy, France, Germany, and even from India. Rev. Mr. Sheshadri is a native of Bombay and was educated at Brahmin. Becoming convinced of the truth of Christianity about thirty years ago he entered the Protestant church. He appears to be about fifty years of age and has a dark copper-colored complexion. He speaks the English language more fluently than most foreigners. He wroe the national costume, consisting of a loose tunic and trowsers and a turban of a fine, white material.

Wednesday forenoon was spent by the delegates in visiting the Capitol, Smithsonian Institution, Treasury and other public buildings. The Capitol especially was much admired by them. Governor Shepherd entertained them at lunch before the departure of the train which carried the most of them back to New York.

INFIDELS AND CHRISTIANS.

—"Tit-for tat is a very good word." The only objection to it is said to be that it is a difficult matter to know just when and where and how to "apply it."

At the general delivery of the city post office in this city, situated on the ground floor of the General Post Office building, a place where immense crowds do usually congregate every day, and Sunday too, there are several huge marble pillars. Against one of these the Young Men's Christian Association has, with the permission of the proper authority, suspended a large, fine and attractive walnut frame. This frame encloses a notice of the location of the Y. M. C. A., also a card giving the hours of service, etc., at the hall of this society. Around these are arranged neat cards giving the locations of the several Evangelical churches, the names of the ministers presiding over them, the hours of service, and other kindred information. The whole thing is gotten up quite stylishly and is well calculated to draw attention.

A few feet from this pillar is another pillar exactly like it, but until a few days since nothing except a thermometer was seen about it. Some time ago the Progressive Society of Spiritualists made application for permission to hang up their card on this unadorned column, and as permission had been already given to the orthodox portion of the community to thus advertise their meetings no good reason could be given for refusing a like favor to those of a different faith. Since then a fine frame in every respect as rich and stylish as the one I have already described was placed where the thermometer formerly was. Now when one enters the post office he is confronted on one hand with flaming cards inviting him cordially to attend the meeting of the Y. M. C. A and the churches, and on the other hand by similar cards inviting him in word equally as pressing to attend the meetings of the Free Religionists at Lyceum Hall.

Of course the good Christian people will be shocked that this sign of the infidels is allowed in such a place, but of course the infidels have all along been shocked that the other sign was allowed to be placed where it has been hanging.

RETURN OF THE TIGRESS.

—The Secretary of the Navy last night received a dispatch informing him of the safe arrival of the Tigress at St. John's, Newfoundland. It will be remembered that this is the vessel that was sent out by the government in search of the Polaris. Commander Green gives no details in the dispatch, merely alluding to "a bad time in Davis Strait." If any misfortune had befallen them he would have reported it. He was probably forced to return by stormy weather and the approach of winter. The Tigress will remain at St. John's a week for repairs and then sail for New York.

——The Methodist Home Camp Meeting, which closes to-night, has been a season of much interest among the religious portion of the community during the past week. A number of visiting divines, and many other from abroad have been in attendence. The opening sermon was preached on Thursday evening last by Rev. Mr. Barnhz, it was a most mosterly discourse. Servises have been held every since then, at ten in the morning, three in after-noon and in the evening. Besides there services and prayer meetings were held at various times. On Sunday, there was a prayer meeting held at six o'clock in the morning which was well attended. At nine was the Love Feast, and, at half past ten the regular service, after which the Sacrement of the Lords Supper was administred. The children's meeting at three in the afternoon was largely attended, and was a most pleasing part of the camp-meeting exercises. A prayer meeting was also held that evening before the regular service, Rev. M. L. Smyser, the pastor in charge, has been untireing in his labors, and there is no doubt but that the Home Camp-meeting has been productive of much good.

——Thomas M. Way had quite an accident in his grain and saw mill in Half Moon township, on last Monday. The belt slipped off the governor pully of the engine, and the latter ran away. It soon raised such a fearful speed that the fly wheel was broken to pieces, the pillow block dislocated and the enjine was damaged considerably before the power was arrested. Repairs are being made and the mill will be running again in few days.

——Wild geese were screaming through the storm of last Sunday night.

Poetry.

BY THE RIVER.

I am sitting alone by the river,
And the willows are sweeping its brink;
The shadows of twilight are falling,
And I sit by the river and think.

The shadows of the twilight grow deeper,
The river is fading from sight;
I can see the gray willows no longer,
And I am alone with the night.

In darkness and gloom, noble river,
Thou art noiselessly floating away;
In darkness and gloom I am floating,
And whither, Oh! say, do I stray?

The learning of Plato and Pascal!
Is madly at work in my brain;
I am satisfied about nothing—
I feel and I reason in vain.

Does justice exist! Oh where is it?
Still the heart of the tyrant is stone,
Still his victims are toiling, despairing;
Still he heeds not, he hears not their moan.

'Tis vain that you tell me, hereafter
These things are not to be so;
We are only able to reason
From that which we see and we know.

For centuries long have the curses
Of the heart-broken pierced to the skies;
For centuries long has no answer
Returned to their desolate cries.

If I call upon nature for comfort,
It is silent and grim as the grave;
The winds will not stop at my question—
No reply from the long-sounding wave.

And the stars, as they glitter above me,
Pure and calm as the flakes of the snow,
Look as cold on the sorrows of mortals
As they looked in the years long ago.

Oh, give me! oh, give me my childhood,
The unquestioning faith that was there,
When I knelt at the feet of my mother,
And gently she taught me my prayer.

I am sitting alone by the river,
And the willows are sweeping its brink;
The twilight has deepened to midnight,
And I sit by the river and think.

Our Story Teller.

HENRI;

OR

THE WEB AND WOOF OF LIFE.

BY WILLIAM G. CAMBRIDGE.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE WEBBER FAMILY.

A decided sensation was produced in our little country town when it became known that my beautiful and accomplished bride was the daughter of Mrs. Stewart, and that she was the little pale-faced, ragged child, who once lived with Deacon Webber. These two facts would have furnished abundant material for conversation; but, adding to them the other facts, it seemed so much like a highly-wrought romance, that the story was in everybody's mouth. The day after our happy gathering of friends, Mr. Edgarton went to visit the Webbers. When he returned, he came in to inform us of the result. It was just after dinner. His face was very red, and there was a roguish twinkle in his little round eyes.

"I have been to see them," said Mr. Edgarton.

"Been to see who?" I inquired.

"The pious ones, to be sure," he replied, laughing.

Uncle Eaton joined in the laugh, and said,

"You old rogue you!—I know where you have been."

"Ha, ha, ha! O, what a face he did make up!"

"Why, who do you mean, Mr. Edgarton?" asked Mrs. Stewart.

"The deacon, to be sure,—who else could it be? I went right away, after breakfast, to tell him the news."

"What!—Deacon Webber?"

"Yes, Deacon Webber, and the rest to 'em too."

"Just to vex and irritate them, I suppose," remarked Lelia. "That is not exactly right, Mr. Edgarton."

"Yes it is, too; I wanted to see the old gentleman grin,—and I did."

"Rejoice not over an enemy," said Mrs. Stewart.

"He deserves it, and more too. If he don't get some of his punishment in this world, he will have more than he can manage in the next."

"If he gets all he deserves," said I.

"He who lives a false life, false to his God and false to his race, suffers every day; his whole life is a hell," said my uncle.

"Right again," said Mr. Edgarton. "I hope the deacon won't find any worse hell than he has already made for himself."

"A benevolent wish," said Uncle Eaton, "and we all unite in it. But let us have your story."

"I went, in the first place," said Mr. Edgarton, "to see Hezekiah Webber. I found him mending his old boots. He sat on his bench, smoking, an exact picture of his father twenty years ago. Such a looking house you never laid your eyes on, and such a looking woman and children. The condition of the house was utterly indescribable,—dirt and confusion."

"She is good-natured, of course," remarked my uncle.

"A regular termagant! I pity the children. And Hezekiah has his match. I told the news, and left them spitting fire at each other."

"How was that?" said I.

"When I told Hezekiah that your wife was the little girl that used to live with his father, and that she was the daughter of Mrs. Stewart, his wife said that she had heard of that little girl, and how they all abused her; and it was just like the Webbers, for they treated everybody like savages. Hezekiah was mad in a minute, and when I left them they were calling each other all sorts of appropriate names."

"You had better not have gone," said Mrs. Stewart.

"They are used to it,—so it won't hurt them any. After I left this interesting couple, I went to pay Job a visit; who, you know, was married a few weeks since. I there found she that was Hannah Webber. I suppose you have not heard the news about her? Her husband, who was a decent sort of a man when he married her, took himself off very suddenly a few days since, and about the same time Rose Webber was off too."

"Worse and worse," I remarked.

"Just so. Job is the most decent one of the lot, and I suppose he may thank you for that."

"How so?" I asked.

"Why, didn't you beat it into him? Ha, ha, ha!"

"I believe I left my mark on him."

"So you did, so you did! O, you are a smart one, only get you fairly started! Well, Job is none too good, but he'll do. He went out of town, and was gone a year or two, and it improved him amazingly; and the wife he brought back with him is quite a woman."

"Then you should not have gone there," said Lelia.

"But I wanted to see her; and what's the good of being partial? I told them the story, and Hannah looked anything but comfortable; and when I had finished she said, 'I hope he will get enough of her, for she was a little, ugly, dirty thing.'

"To my great surprise, Job said it was false, and that when she lived with his father they all abused her, from the oldest to the youngest, excepting his mother.

"'I am glad to hear you confess the truth,' said his wife.

"At this, Hannah caught her bonnet, and, calling them both fools bolted out of the house, and went straight to see her darling brother Hezekiah.

"After she had gone, Job and his wife asked me many questions about you, which I answered as well as I could.

We spoke of the knocking down scrape, and he said he did not blame you at all. I then called on the deacon. I went in rather suddenly, and found him bending over a pile of gold. I suppose he had been counting it. He said he "wished people would rap when they came in."

"How did he look?" inquired my uncle.

"Worse than a beast! His face and hands were black with dirt and filth. His face and head have not cultivated the acquaintance of a razor or comb for a long time, I'll warrant you."

"Was he decently clothed?" asked Mrs. Stewart.

"About as well as he used to clothe your daughter,—not a whit better. But the room in which he stays is worse than all the rest. I was glad to get out, and breathe the fresh air again."

"You did your errand first, did you not?" said my uncle.

"Certainly, certainly! I said, 'Deacon, I have got some news.'

"'What do I care!' he growled.

"'You may care a good deal, after you know what it is.'

"'After I hear it, I can tell better; so out with it, and don't keep me waiting, old soap-tub! for my time is precious.'"

When Mr. Edgarton told this, he burst into a loud laugh, in which we all joined.

"A pretty good joke," said my uncle.

"Very good, very good! The deacon would like to boil me up and make me into soap, I don't doubt. I should not wonder if he had formed a pretty correct estimate of what the soap would bring!"

I suggested to Mr. Edgarton that he would make a large quantity.

"So I should," he said. "Ha, ha! a very large quantity! But to return to my visit. 'You remember Henri Eaton, deacon?' I remarked.

"He looked up fiercely and said,

"'The villian!—what of him?'

"'He is married, deacon.'

"'What's that to me?'

"'Nothing in particular,—only he has married that little girl he enticed away from you; and she is very rich, too!'

"'Gods, he said, 'I wish I had them in my power. I'd make them feel my wrath!'

"I continued. 'She is the daughter of Mrs. Stewart, and a gentleman has left them thousands!'

"'How much?' he inquired, eagerly.

"'Thousands upon thousands!' I replied.

"'I'll have it, if there is any law and justice in the land!' he said, grinding his teeth, and looking wild and fierce. 'She ran away from me, and he helped her—it was a great loss. I lost eight years labor, and I'll have the worth in gold, in bright yellow gold, and the interest.'

"'The property was willed to her, you know.'

"'I don't care if it was,—I will have it! It would have been all mine, If it had not been for that bloody villian, that robber. O, I should like to tear out his eyes! I'll break the will, for she is not the daughter of Mrs. Stewart. I can prove that she is Means' child.'

"I just went on to tell him the whole story, when he growled and raved still more. He ordered me out of the house; and, not wishing to stay any longer, I came away."

"He is a beautiful character," I remarked.

"Beautiful! so is old clump-foot beautiful. Well, well; the devil will have the picking of his bones, one of these days,—that's some comfort."

"Why, Mr. Edgarton!" said my aunt.

"He is a horrid creature, Mrs. Eaton, and that's the truth. I should like to give him one walloping for his abuse of Lelia.'

"Leave him in the hands of his Maker," said Mrs. Stewart. "'Shall not the Lord of the earth do right?'"

The next morning news came that Deacon Webber was crazy. In company with my uncle and Mr. Edgarton, I went to see him. He had become so raving in the night that it was necessary to chain him. After chained, he tore every rag of clothing from his body. I have never seen such a hideous, frightful object, as he was on that morning.

"It is mine, all, all mine," he said; "and I'll have it! Ha! ha! ha! ha! the white silver and the yellow gold is all mine. They thought to rob me of it, did they? They can't do it. I'll have it, I'll have it! Will they keep it all? No, no! by the gods. Justice! Justice! See! there's a robber after my gold,—my yellow gold. Back! back with ye, you bloody villian! Let me get hold of him! I'll break his bones, tear his heart out, and let the swine feast upon his flesh!

Let me go! let me go, I say! they are robbing me! O God! O God! There! there they are, stealing all my treasures. Stand back! away! I—I—know you now. The demons—the black demons—hold me fast! Don't don't take it all! I am a poor old man. I sold my soul for my gold;—it's all I have. You will not take it all, good people? Leave the old man a little! I pray you,—I beg! I shall starve, if you take it. Could I but break these chains, I'd tear ye! Beware, ye bloody fiends! O! what is burning at my heart? Hell is in my bosom! O, my head! my head! Don't you see the devils? Look! see their red jaws, long teeth, and flaming tongues! How they hiss! Down with ye, damned spirits! down to hell! Where is my gold? I know; I hid it all last night. Ha! ha! Search, search for it, ye villians! but you can't find it,—you never can find it Ha! ha! ha! ha!

"I'll have him yet. He cannot escape me now. He shall not always baulk me. Let me look to it,—look to it,—or I'll tear out his dastard heart! I'll bite out his eyes! Don't take it,—the poor old man will starve. I shall die! Laugh, ye horrid monsters! Ha! ha! ha! ha!"

In this strain he continued, with scarcely any intermission; and before many days had passed away he was a corpse. His property amounted to thirty thousand dollars, and he had willed it, with the exception of two hundred dollars, to Hezekiah and Hannah. After his death, Mr. Edgarton felt some remorse, lest what he said to him had been the cause of it. But I told him that most likely the result would have been the same when the story reached him, and I did not doubt that he was more than half crazy before. These suggestions were abundantly satisfactory to him, and he was as ready to laugh and joke as ever.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

MY FATHER'S DIARY.

The reader will remember that my mother, on her death-bed requested me to read my father's diary. My mind had been so much occupied with other subjects that I had hitherto neglected to do so. I took it out of the drawer while Uncle and Aunt Eaton were visiting us, and, after reading it to myself, at their request read the most of it to them. Some brief extracts may not prove uninteresting to the reader:

"It has ever been my boast that I was heart-whole, but I can utter that boast no more. I was fated, to-day, to behold a being of such entrancing beauty that my heart surrendered at once. One glance from those killing black eyes, and it was all over with me; for I felt as helpless as a captive bird. 'Well, Mr. Eaton, what's to be done now?' A pertinent question, and Mr. Eaton must answer it. I do not know who she is. I do not even know what is her name, but I will learn it, I make no doubt; and what is more, I'll learn her heart too, and win it to myself, to be all my own, if so be the gods but aid me."

* * * * *

"I am happy and sad to-night; happy because I have seen the beautiful angel again, and sad lest I should fail to win her. But it must not be so. I'll study the lexicon of my heart, and, if I find any such word there as fail, I will expunge it before I sleep. Mary Flanders, that's her name, and it is a good name too; but how would it look changed to Mary Eaton? I like the latter best. I always did think that Mary was the sweetest name in the universe, and now it is ten thousand times sweeter than ever. A friend asked me to-day, if I thought her handsome. Handsome! she is more than that, for she is perfectly beautiful. Every feature of her face is charming, and her eyes are soul-full of thought, eloquent, and big with hope, light and joy. But her form is enravishing,—full, round, almost voluptuous; but I would not have it other than it is, for it is perfect.'

* * * * *

"O, this suspence is killing, and I cannot endure it! I must see Mary;—see her, ay, I must know her well. Who is coming to disturb my revery now, I wonder? The intruder is not welcome. A letter,—no, a note;—an invitation to a party at Mr. ———'s. I will go, and may I be so fortunate as to meet her who is so dear to this unquiet heart."

* * * * *

"It is nearly morning, and here I am, once more, in my own little room; but I have no wish so sleep, no inclination,—so I will write. This has been a charming night, and the moon has swam in the blue ocean above for many pleasant hours. Her light has now departed, for yonder black cloud, 'rolling up in the west with such dark grandeur, caught her in her huge arms and smothered her out of sight. And Mary was at the party; all that I prayed for has been granted. We know each other now. I have touched her hand, and, O, rapture! I have pressed my lips to her downy cheeks and ripe lips, and she has pressed her lips to mine! Thanks, thanks for this party, or this could not have been. I kissed others,—did I? Bah! but I could not help it. I would have kissed a whole army of women rather than lost those sweet kisses of Mary."

* * * * *

"O, cruel disappointment! thou tellest me I am but a mortal. With a friend I called on Mr. Flanders to-day, but I did not see Mary; she, alas! was far away, fifty miles from home, at school. Delays are dangerous, I do believe, for I should have gone before. What shall I do now."

* * * * *

"The skies look brighter to-night, for I have had an encouraging word from Mary's father. I called and was shown into his study, and, after discussing politics, the weather, and various other things, in which I fell into most ludicrous mistakes, I made bold to speak of Mary. He seemed deeply interested, and talked in such a way as to encourage me to tell him what my sentiments were. He said he conceived it an honor, and hoped I might win his daughter's heart and hand, for I had his sanction and best wishes. 'You met at Mr. ———'s party. She spoke of you so often afterwards, that we all told her she was in love with you; and I doubt not she was well pleased with your appearance.' Mr. Flanders invited me to call again soon. I shall go.

* * * * *

"I have once more seen the father of my darling Mary: for I feel that she is mine now, or nearly so. Mr. Flanders says that Mary loves me, but he wishes the matter should be left where it is until she returns from school; for, if I should write or visit her, he is fearful that her schooling will do her but little good. She would be thinking of me, and not of her books. Bless her, I hope she will think of me! O, how enraptaring, to engage all the thoughts of such a glorious being! I have promised to comply with the wishes of Mr Flanders. But, in the mean time, what shall I do? I cannot stay here for this ennui is awful,—so I am off."

* * * * *

"It was late last night when I returned from my journey, and so I could not see the one whom I so dearly love. I had but just laid my head upon my pillow, when the wind began to blow—not loud and clear, like that of the West, which goes on its way with such a grand sweep, making all the proud trees do it reverence as it passes by; but, it had an unpleasant moan, and sometimes it sobbed as if it had known the bitterness of great grief. The sounds went to my heart, and caused it to feel strangely sad; as though some calamity was about to draw near, and touch my hopes with the poison of its lips. Is it superstition, or has the wind a spirit which warns us of approaching griefs and disappointments? I know not, but I feel disappointment to-night. I went this afternoon, with a light heart, to visit her who is one day to be all my own. To my surprise, I learned that she had been at home some months. But how she had changed since I last saw her! What can be the cause of it? She is pale and listless, and her face has lost the sprightly, joyous expression. I fear she has studdied too much. Overtax the brain, and the roses will leave the cheek, and the brightest eye grow dull. But she seemed not pleased to see me. Has her nature lost all its glad enthusiasm,—its up-springing, buoyant life? I hope not!"

* * * * *

"We are to marry,—and yet I am not happy. There must be trouble somewhere, and I wish I could learn what and where it is. The sky is cloudy, and the grief rain is falling; and will the bow of promise come out? I love her—love her dearly; but, does she love me? Shall the golden light of mutual joy ever gladden our way? There is a bright star looking down sweetly at me; is it an omen of good? Alas! the clouds have shut it from my sight, and again the wind sobs as it did on the first night of my return. O, my God! grant me but this, that when Mary is all my own, she shall smile again as of yore!"

* * * * *

"Mary is a wife now—my wife,—but we are not happy; and my heart, instead of brimming with joy to-night, is aching with hopes once so fresh and glad, but now withering for the grave. Only one week, 'one little' week, since we married; and yet, O, horror! I almost regret that she is mine. Two or three languid, miserable smiles, is all the sunshine I have known since I led her, with loving hands and a faithful heart, to the altar. She is irritable and unhappy, and I———Travel and excitement may produce change, and bring back the color to her cheeks, and a smile to her eye. O, I would give worlds to see her once more as she was on that heavenly night when I first pressed my lips to her beautiful cheek!"

"Bright summer glories are all around me, and the day is clear, balmy and serene. There was a time when I should have been happy, most happy, on a day like this. But O, I am not happy now, and I may never be again; for the bright angel of hope comes not now to make her home in my heart! I could not have believed, upon my wedding day, that in two short months—short, have I said?—I should be the poor wretch that I am. Mary is not only unhappy herself, but she is very unkind; and sometimes she says things to me that I would bear from no other living being. I have done all that I could to gratify her. We have visited many interesting places. We have stood by the sea-side, and viewed the blue expanse of waters, and heard the great hymn of the waves, and saw them dash upon the shore, as though they would break through the battlements of God! We have seen the mountains, whose snowy summits were capped with clouds; and we have stood upon their highest peaks, and heard the wind rush down their sides, the thunders rumble and roar, while the lightning leaped from the dark, threatening masses above and around, and covered the mountains with red sheets of flame. We have seen Niagara, the wonder of the world; her wild, madly-dashing waters, her billows of foam, her clouds of mist and spray, and her rainbows, which seemed like water-spirits dropped down from the clouds. We heard the mighty cataract, and almost fancied we saw the lightnings, when the falling waters flashed in the sunlight. But, merciful God! all has been in vain. I have entreated Mary to tell me why she is not happy; but she will not open her lips."

* * * * *

"Cold winter is rapidly approaching. Alas! the winter of the heart has already come, cruelly blighting fresh-budding hopes, cutting down all the flowers of life, filling the air with frost and snow, and desolating the world! Life has become a burden, for all the leaping fountains of pleasure are fettered with the chains of cold and frost. Happiness has been stabbed at the heart, and she lays low in the dust, bleeding, dying; and the freezing winds are howling around her, shrieking her requiem."

* * * * *

"What a dream of bliss was mine! O, God! that I was doomed to awake to such horrors. Peace, poor heart and murmur not, but hope yet. Yea, I will hope. There must be a change for the better. Mary will yet love me. When a mother's hopes and joys are hers, her heart must soften."

* * * * *

"What would be winter with no expectation of gentle spring? Should we not despair? Such is my lot, for Mary dearly loves her bright-eyed boy, but there is little love for me. He is a beautiful child, and I have given him the name of my only brother. May his heart be as noble and good!

* * * * *

"Many years have rolled away, and journeyed far into the past, since my wedding day,—a day so big with hope. I remember, as though it were but yesterday. It was when the hills and valleys were spread over with the freshness and beauty of spring, and my heart was light and joyous, almost perfect in its happiness. A few sunny smiles would have made it so. I then thought I had just commenced life. Every eye seemed to rest upon my lovely bride with admiration. Alas! she had no beauty of the heart. We have now four children; and the last, a beautiful boy, I have named for myself. This does not please his mother. She wanted his name Herbert, but I would have one child who shall bear my name. Herbert is a name that will do well enough; but I see no reason why she should have insisted upon his having the name. If she had a friend or relative by the name of Herbert, I should not think so strange of it."

* * * * *

"What a marvellous thing is this life o' ours! Who can solve its mysteries? Why is it that so many should groan in poverty, doomed to unremitting toil for a pittance so small that it barely keeps body and soul from parting? Why is it that a portion of mankind should live in idle extravagance and waste? Why are we doomed to misfortune, sickness, and the thousand ills that the flesh is heir to? Such thoughts will come crowding upon me at times; and, then I should fall under the weight of my sorrows, if my faith in an over-ruling Power was not strong and unwavering. He who permitted evil and suffering to enter the world will ultimately over-rule them all for good. Let me believe this, and my heart shall still find rest. That I must continue to suffer, I well know; but it would seem that I should be happy. I have an abundance of what are called the good things of this world, and a wife and four beautiful children. Why should I not be happy? There is but one thing lacking. I was made to love and to be loved. If Mary loved me truly, and was ever kind to me and faithful to her children, fullness of joy would be mine. I had anticipated so much happiness in the married state, that the cruel disappointment is grievous to be borne. O, God! give me patience, to bear without a murmur my heavy burden of grief."

* * * * *

"I regret that our ideas of governing children are so different. I would never strike them a blow. Such punishment is degrading, and should be banished from the world. Henri is not a favorite with his mother, and on that account, I fear he receives more whippings than he otherwise would."

* * * * *

"'Trouble, trouble.
'Fire burn and cauldron bubble.'

"I do not like to quarrel and wrangle and yet I cannot always avoid it. My wife has just been whipping Henri, very severely, for a most trivial offence. I demanded the cause of such harsh treatment, and she told me to attend to my own business, and she would take care of hers. She intended to be mistress in the house, and she had no objection to my being master out side of it."

"It will do no good to whip a child so young," I said.

"He is my child," she replied, "as much as yours; and I will whip him when I think he deserves it!"

"But you are too severe, and you will ruin him forever, and drive all the love from his heart."

"He shall mind me, or I will whip him till the blood runs!"

These words, and the manner in which she uttered them, made me angry and I said, "By ——, you shan't!"

"So help me God, I will!" she replied,

"You abuse him, Mary, and you know you do. If you corrected him as a parent should, I would be the last one to interfere."

"He is the most irritable and the worse-tempered boy I ever saw; and, when I think that a whipping will do him good, he will be pretty sure to get it, in spite of your prohibition."

"Be careful, Mary, or you may go beyond the bounds of endurance. You know, as well as I do, that Henri is a noble boy, for one so young. If he has a quick, passionate temper, such treatment as he receives at your hands will only make it worse and worse every day. How can you be so cruel to your own child?"

"I am not to blame for his bad temper of course. He has your disposition, and that is enough to wear any one to the grave. I wonder that I have lived so long!"

"So do I, Mary. We live a most miserable life,—and who is the cause of it?"

"Of course, I am the whole cause of it. That is the way with you men.—the women are all to blame."

"Ask your own heart."

"I shall not trouble myself."

"O, Mary!"

"If you are about to faint, I'll run for the camphor."

Such scenes are not unfrequent in our home; and so peace and happiness have sought in vain to take up their abode with us. God knows that I hate these matrimonial conflicts. I witnessed some before I was married; but I little dreamed that I should be doomed to take part in them. Henri is a smart, high-spirited boy; and, as his mother does not manifest so much love and forbearance for him as for the other children, he is the cause of most of our bickerings. I did not wish to have more affection for one child than another; but I know well enough that I love Henri best. As his mother does not treat him so well as she should, his brothers and sisters seem to think they have the same privilege; and the evil has doubly increased since the birth of George. I fear that Henri's disposition will be entirely spoiled. If he is not used well, he is ever ready to fight, whether his opponent is great or small. I tremble to think what he may be led to do, in a moment of passion, should he live to be a man!

"Mary is one of the strangest women I have ever met with. She has manifested but little affection for me, since she became my wife. A few times she has seemed to relent,—the love-star would glimmer for a moment and then go out in three-fold darkness. When she has given me but a single ray of love, I have felt that, would it continue to shine on, I could forget and forgive all. Why did she marry me, if she had no love in her heart? I imagine, sometimes, that there is a hidden cause for this strange conduct; but what it is I have sought in vain to learn. I have watched her when she seemed in deep and painful thought; for she sat in an abstracted mode, and tears rolled down her cheeks, which still retain much of the beauty they possessed when she first won my love. I fancy, at times, that she is deranged. Would to God I could believe it! But no,—or if it 'be madness, yet there is method in it.'

"Well, well! repining will do no good; so I will try to suffer on, without murmuring. My life is not in vain; for I sometimes visit the suffering, feed the hungry, and clothe the naked. I have done it today. A poor drunkard's family was in the greatest distress, and it did my heart good to relieve it. How thankful they were. It is a luxury to do good. 'More blessed to give than receive.'

"Heaven has sent us another child, and his name is Herbert. I wished to call him William, after an old friend; but I had my way once before, and so his mother has her way now. But why is she so tenacious about it? I suppose I shall learn the reason when I learn a great many other things more mysterious than this."

* * * * *

"Trouble and grief have at last done their work, and now I must die. Consumption has poisoned the very fountain of life, and there is no hope. It has already deceived me too often. Health and strength will never come again. Such is life, and I am reconciled. My wife is a little more kind, but she loves me not; but may God pardon her as freely as I do! I must leave seven children, with no one to guide them aright. I am wrong; Mrs. Stewart has promised to be a mother to them,—bear and forbear—and she will be faithful to her word. She has done much for my children now; and her influence with Henri is great, and he dearly loves her. I would that there was more union among the children, but wishes are vain. I have never seen a stronger love between brothers than there is between Henri and Herbert. This fact seems to vex their mother not a little, which is another mystery."

* * * * *

"I must leave them all in the hands of God, trusting that all things shall come out well at last. My wife has made one solemn promise, for which I thank her. Mrs. Stewart is to reside in the family until my children become men and women. It is hard to leave them; but the great King demands that another victim shall be offered on his dark altar, and I am ready. I shall depart in peace, trusting in the redeeming grace of Jesus Christ. When I shall have entered the spirit-land, may God grant, even though it bring weary toil and suffering, that I may be allowed to watch over and guard my children!

These extracts, which I have made from the large number of pages of which the journal is composed, are sufficient to show to the reader how unhappy was my father's wedded life. They show, too, that he had a good heart, and that he bore his wrongs with a commendable degree of patience.

TO BE CONTINUED.

WHAT DID THEY MEAN.—"Pa," said a young hopeful to his father, a prominent citizen, "what is meant by 'a chip of the old block?'"

"Why, my son, do you ask such a question?"

"Because, I was out hunting this morning, and after returning home, I told some gentlemen that while out hunting, I saw fifty squirrels up one tree. They kept trying to make me say that I did not see but forty-nine, and because I wouldn't say so, they said I was 'a chip of the old block.'"

"Hem! Well, my son, they meant that you were smart and honest like your pa. You can go and play now."

Carl Pretzel says: "Der young man vot did said der vorld owed him some lifin, vas ladely turned der door out on ackount he's landlady vas unwilling to dook on her shoulder plade der indebtedness of der vorld."

A school examiner lately gave a bright-looking boy this sentance to correct, "Between you and I this is good butter." The boy shortly returned the slip thus marked, "Incorrect: the lamp-post is omitted."

A man from Placerville, Cal., when asked by a Saratoga waiter what he would have for breakfast, replied:

"Well, I rather guess I'll just flop my lip over a chicken."

BLACK-EYED SUSAN.—During the hearing of a case at a police court a woman stated that her husband had given her during their married life "one hundred eyes."

"AMONG all my boys," said an old man, "I never had but one boy who took after me, and that was my son Aaron, who took after me with a club."

JUST OUT—THE NEW LIGHT RUNNING

HOWE

Sewing Machine

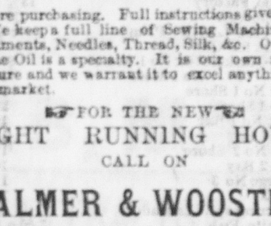
THE GRANDEST PRODUCTION OF INVENTIVE GENIUS.

The new factory of the Howe Company is nearly completed, and

1000

ARE NOW BEING MANUFACTURED AND SOLD DAILY!

The total number sold last year was 220,000, which far exceeds the sales of any other single machine.



THE ONLY MACHINE MADE ON THOROUGHLY SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES.

Combining Strength, Simplicity & Durability with Lightness of Running.

It is superior to all in the following respects:
1st. Simplicity of construction.
2nd. Ease of management.
3d. Lightness of running.
4th. Non-liability to get out of repair.
5th. Durability—it being made of the finest hardened steel.
6th. Perfection of tension on both upper and lower threads, and the ease with which they are controlled by the operator. It makes a perfect Lock Stitch on all kinds of goods and never breaks the thread.
7th. The strength and regularity of the new feed, which enables it to stitch soft or glazed, light, or heavy work equally well, and to cross heavy seams or fells without the slightest difficulty.

The new improved HEMMER, FELLER, BRAIDER, QUILTER and GUIDE; Also, OILER, BOTTLE OIL, Doz. NEEDLES, BOBBINS, &c., go with each Machine free of charge. In addition to these, we will give a Ruffler and an alpaca Hemmer with each machine, making more attachments than are given with any machine in use

Bellefonte, Pa

THE CONTRAST BETWEEN THE REVENUE SYSTEMS OF ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES

The policy of England in the adjustment of her tariff is precisely the same as that which the Free-trade League of New York is now pressing upon the attention of the farmers' granges, with glowing pictures of its advantages over the system adopted in the United States. It is the old theory of the Manchester school of political economists. They claim, and England applies the test, that manufactured goods, and such other articles as her own people can produce, should be entered from foreign countries free of duty; while "articles that cannot be produced at home should be taxed." In the United States the policy is to impose a tariff on imported manufactures and products that come into competition with like products of our own country, and admit "free of duty" goods that cannot be produced at home, and in which there can therefore be no competition. England admits to her markets, duty free all manufactures from silk, wool, and cotton, iron, steel, &c.—articles that come in direct competition with the labor of her own people. At the same time she imposes a tax of $1 94, $2 33, $2 55, and $2 93 per hundred weight on sugar, according to quality; 12 cents per lb. on tea; 6 cents per lb. on coffee; 7 cents per lb. on chocolate, and 72 to 97 cents per lb. on tobacco—articles which she cannot produce, but which go largely to make up the expenses of the poor man's family. In the United States manufactures from silk, wool, and cotton, iron, steel, &c., which come into competition with similar products of our own workmen, are subject to a tariff tax, while tea and coffee and other articles of daily consumption, which we cannot produce, are admitted free of duty. This is the distinctive feature between the policy of England and that of the United States. England taxes her aggregate imports nearly as heavily as we do, but by a system which largely embraces the expences of the poor man's family, and leaves domestic industry to be enslaved by foreign and unfair competition. In England legislation has been mainly to benefit the rich at the expense of the masses.

Sir Edward Sullivan, member of Parliament of England, in a recent publication on "Protection to Native Industry," asks the following partinent question:

"Is it not absurd and stupid and irritating to the working classes to admit, duty free, all they produce, and to tax all they consume; to admit, duty free, clocks, matches, silk, paper, gloves, glass, ribbons, hats, boots, shoes, millinery, the finer kinds of cotton and linen goods, and scores of other industries, and to continue a heavy tax on cocoa, coffee, sugar, tea and tobacco?"

Yet, strange as it may appear, this has been for many years the governing rule in England in the regulation of her tariff.

——The following letter from disgusted democrat explains in a measure, the dishonest and unjust favoritism shown by the Watchman:—

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—The Watchman, of last week makes an intentional misstatement when it puffs certain parties for bringing early election returns from Penns-valley. It is a fact that I arrived there, with the returns from this side, one half hour in advance of the party that received the Watchman puffs, and that paper knows it, for it had the privilege of copying the returns complete before the "favorites" arrived, ignored the facts and gave credit to the parties to whom it does not belong. This shows their ingratitude. If I had been one of the fancy order of "good fellows" I might have received recognition. I am an unflinching democrat and a common man, but claim the privilege of stating the facts of the case.

Manhood: How Lost, How Resorted?

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHŒA or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

☞ Price in a sealed envelope only six cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once, simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post-paid on reciept of six cents, or two post stamps.

OUT OF WONDER AT LAST.—The Howe Sewing Machine Co. advertise "The Light Running Howe." I did not know what it meant as it takes a horse-power to run them, until the other day I saw an agent running one with castors on it, over the floor at the exhibition house at the Fair ground. COSMOLINE is the concentrated extract of the healing properties of Petroleum, which are known. It is the most bland and soothing remedy ever used; beside possessing more healing power than any substance or compound ever prepared. It is for almost all the daily casualties which occur in household, the workshop, or on the farm, as well as for many of the diseases which afflict humanity.

Nature's Sovereign Remedy

FOR BURNS AND SCALDS

It is invaluable, cooling and soothing the injured parts at once, and producing a perfect cure in a very short time, without leaving any scars. For this purpose alone, it is

A BLESSING TO THE WORLD,

FOR FROSTED LIMBS, COSMOLINE is fully as efficacious as for burns and scalds, restoring a healthy action to the injured parts very quickly. It is also the best possible remedy for Chilblains and Chapped Hands.

FOR RHEUMATISM especially Inflammatory, most forms of NEURALGIA, swelling of Limbs or Glands, COSMOLINE affords in the shortest possible time the HAPPIEST RELIEF.

ON CUTS AND BRUISES, the action of COSMOLINE is almost magical. If promptly applied, it prevents soreness, and the wounds heal very rapidly.

FOR PILES, it has proved to be an unequalled remedy, and many a sufferer has blessed the day of its introduction.

FOR SKIN DISEASES we can recommend it with the greatest confidence, especially for Salt. Rheum, Tetter, Eczema, etc., and Teething humours.

We might go on enumerating the many other conditions for which it is unequalled, but will only add that wherever there is inflammation from any cause, COSMOLINE brings a rapid and happy relief, and will be the dependence under all circumstances. COSMOLINE is Prescribed by the best physicians, both allopathic and homeopathic. It is but nature's own production, brought into an agreeable and pleasant condition, and is as safe to use anywhere as fresh cream.

HOUSEHOLD SURGEON'S

NOT A PATENT MEDICINE,

Agricultural.

☞ NOTE.—We earnestly desire that this epartment of our paper shall be made as useful as possible to our Agricultural friends, and therefore extend a cordial invitation to all parties interested, to favor us with contributions. Individuals who have made useful experiments and yet do not feel competent to write them out in form for publication, if they will favor us with the results we will take pleasure in putting them in proper shape.

Hints for Early Autumn.

A few timely suggestions in the care of fruit trees at the present time, may serve as a reminder to those who are apt to overlook minor operations at the right moment. Ground for setting out new fruit gardens should be well prepared early in autumn, by the necessary plowing, pulverization and intermixture of compost or old manure. It will be in better condition for remaining a few months, and the manure will be more perfectly diffused through the soil than if prepared just before planting time. If the garden is intended strictly for a fruit garden, to be planted either with dwarfs or with small or moderate sized trees, the roots of which in a few ye ars will extend through every part, the whole surface should be thoroughly plowed, enriched and prepared. But for large apple orchards, where the whole ground will not be occupied for several years, the preparation of strips by plowing, eight or ten feet wide, will be sufficient for the present. Unless the land has a steep slope these strips should be plowed so as to extend directly down hill, and thus assist in effecting good drainage.

The quantity of manure to be applied to orchard ground must be judged according to circumstances. In some places it is already rich enough; but more frequently a greater or less degree of artificial enriching is important. As a general rule, the leading shoots of young orchards should grow from two to three feet annually; if much less than two feet we may be sure that the soil and cultivation are not good enough; if the growth is more than three feet, the wood will be too succulent, and be liable to winter-killing. It should never be made a substitute for good, constant, clean cultivation—the tending to a more perfect and healthy ripening of the wood than can be affected on any land by manure alone.

The operation of budding peaches may still be performed, where young trees are to be propagated, if the stocks are still in thrifty growing conditions, so that the bark lifts freely. Quince stocks may likewise be budded with the pear to anvantage as late as the present time, this lateness preventing the premature starting of the buds. Watch the stocks to prevent the ligatures cutting into them. Newly set strawberry beds should be scrupulously kept clean, and the runners cut off, so that the plants may form large and vigorous stools. If the rooting of runners is permitted, the plants will be seriously exhausted. Pears which are approaching maturity should be gathered while yet hard, as soon as the stem will loosen as they are slighty raised. Many fine crops are spoiled by allowing to ripen on the tree, causing core-rot, and destroying the flavor. After gathering, they may be placed on shelves and covered with woolen blankets or carpet, or ripened in drawers. The exclusion of light is important.—County Gentleman.

Lasting Fence Posts.

A correspondent of one of our agricultural exchanges says: "I discovered many years ago that wood could be made to last longer than iron in the ground, but thought the process so simple and inexpensive that it would not be worth while to make a stir about it. I would as soon have poplar, bass wood or quaking ash as any other kinds of timber for fence posts. I have taken out bass wood posts after having been set seven years, that were as sound on taking up as when they were first put in the ground. Time and weather seemed to have no effect on them. The posts can be prepared for less than two cents apiece. For the benefit of others I will give the receipt. Boil linseed oil and stir in it pulverized charcoal to the consistency of paint. Put a coat of this over the timber, and there is not a man that will live to see it rotten.

THE farmer who has barns amble enough to house all his stock, can give the same stock an unfailing supply of water the year round. The rain that falls on the roof, if caught in cisterns, will water all the stock the roof can comfortably shelter.

A Model Stock Farm.

On Friday last a few gentlemen of Philadelphia paid a visit, by pecial invitation of James Young, sq., to the immense stock farm of the latter, at Middletown, Dauphin county, Pa. The chief attraction of the visitors was the splendid collection of Jersey cattle which is in possession of Mr. Young. Of this collection President Grant, during a recent visit to the farm of Mr. Young, expressed the opinion that it is the very finest in the United States, and none who have seen the splendid stock hold any other view. Mr. Young in 1858 purchased a small farm in Middletown, where he had formerly been engaged in the lumber trade. The latter business he then relinquished, and gradually added to the area of his farm by purchasing adjoining lots, until it now contains almost 1000 acres; but, such is the systematic practice of the owner that this immense tract could scarcely be better managed were it only a five-acre field. Not the least admirable feature of this grand tract is that it has nearly all been reclaimed from low and marshy soil or ground otherwise unfitted for agriculture. There is not an acre of it now that is not arable and steadily yielding crops of some kind.

Mr. Young and his son drove the visitors over the farm, on which there are nine dwelling houses and eight large barns, all neat and substantial. On one of the former, known most appropriately as the "Grand View Farm House," there is an observatory, from which a fine view of the surrounding country can be had.

There are on the estate over twenty five miles of fencing, uniformly coated with whitewash, the gates all being painted red, and more than three miles of private roadway, all in first-class condition. It is estimated that over five miles of drain pipe have been laid and covered on various parts of the farm. This year the farm has been thus laid out;—To corn 163 acres; to wheat, 190 acres; to oats, 122 acres; to hay, 248 acres; to potatoes, 9 acres; to gardening, 3 acres; to pasturage, 70 acres, and to orchards, 20 acres.

The stock is in good condition, and looks more like carefully groomed horses than like cattle that take care of their own appearance. Any one of the animals would be an ornament to the gentleman's lawn or paddock, and some of them seemed to entertain for their owner a dog-like affection. in the herb, which is composed mostly of the pure Alderney stock, Mr. Young has varieties, such as Alderney and Guernsey and pure Guernsey. He also has two of what are known as "Blue Jerseys which he prizes highly. The finest animnal in the stock is an Alderney bull, known as "Skylite," a truly magnificent specimen of his breed, with a perfect symmetry of form, a small, slender head, surmounted by thin, open horns, and with the long, flat and narrow neck that is one of the principal characteristics of the Channel Island cow.

One of the visiting party asked Mr. Young some questions as to the relative values of the Alderney and the common stock for dairy purposes and learned that both in quality and quantity of milk yield the former is the superior. The milk from the Jersey cow is as rich in quality as the cream from the milk of the common cow, and while the average amount of butter yielded by a stock like that owned by Mr. Young will be ten pounds of butter from each cow, only six or seven pounds are producible from the ordinary cow. The butter from the Alderney milk, too, is not only far richer in quality, but it has a firmness which it retains through the cold of winter and the heat of summer when the butter of the ordinary cow is barely marketable.

Mr. Alfred M. Herkness, of Philadelphia, who was also one of the visiting party (and through whom most of M. Young's herd has been imported), says that for some of the finer Alderneys of the stock Mr. Young has paid nearly five hundred dollars ahead. A fair conception can be formed from this of the value of the stock on this farm, included in which there is a fine flock of Southdown sheep, an immense hennery, about thirty or forty "Chester white" pigs, and a very large dovecote; and the farm with all its branches is worked as though by machinery, Mr. Young personally directing all.—Inquirer.

PACKING and marketing fruit will occupy much of the attention of the orchardist. Those who take their fruit to village markets near by would find it to their interest to take more pains than they usually do. Apples are shaken from the trees, thrown into a wagon body and sold for what they will bring.

If nothing more can be done, let the wagon body be lined with straw, and only fine, sound fruit be put in. It would be much better if the fruit could be taken in bushel baskets or even boxes. Attention to appearance will pay even in small markets.

INSECTS require attention almost every month. Wind-falls should be picked up and fed to the pigs, as they generally contain grub Cocoons, and all kinds of nests should be removed as soon as discovered. Whenever sawdust is found at the root of a tree a borer is at work, and should be cut or probed out.

To dry small lots of fruit, a frame covered with hot-bed or window sash will answer a good purpose. The frame or box should be raised from the ground, and have openings for ventilation, which are to be covered by wire-gauze or mosquito-netting to keep out flies and other insects.

THERE WAS A LITTLE BOY.

There was a little boy, with two little eyes,
And he had a little head that was just the proper size,
And two little arms, and two little hands;
On two little legs this little boy he stands.

Now this little boy would now and then be cross;
Because he could only be the very thing he was;
He wanted to be this, then he wanted to be that;
His head was full of wishes underneath his little hat.

"I wish I was a drummer, to beat a kettle drum;
I wish I was a giant to say fee-fo-fi-faw-fum;
I wish I was a captain to go sailing in a ship;
I wish I was a huntsman to crack a nice new whip.

"I wish I was a horse to go forty miles an hour;
I wish I was the man that stays up in the light-house tower;
I wish I was a sea gull with two long wings;
I wish I was a traveler to see all sorts of things.

"I wish I was a carpenter; I wish I was a lord;
I wish I was the man that goes up high in the baloon;
I wish, I wish, I wish I could be something else, and soon."

But all the wishes in the world is not a bit of use;
That little boy this very day he stands in his own shoes;
That little boy is still but little Master What-do-you-call,
As much as if that boy had never wished at all;

He eats his bread and butter, and he likes it very much;
He grubs about, and bumps his head, and bowls his hoop and such;
And his father and his mother they say, "Thank the gracious powers,
Those wishes cannot wish away that little boy of ours!"

A Canine Thug.

Five districts of Lancashire England, were recently thrown into consternation by the energetic malignity of a desparate dog. Starting out early on a late morning, this canine thug began running "a-muck," first attacking a boy and spoiling his clothes. He next bestowed his attentions upon another boy, who was chasing his cap which had blown off and was scudding before the wind. After disrobing him he attacked a butcher but was beaten off. He was thereupon reported to his owner, and chained up for three days, when he broke the chains that bound him, scratched a hole through the panel of a door, and wandered forth in search of fresh adventures. He soon attacked a lady, inflicting slight injuries; then a son of a neighboring farmer, his dog and two horses. The postman of Seaforth village was next visited, and severely bitten; afterward, another boy in the leg and thigh. At about this point the community began to be aroused, and persued the brute with guns, pitchforks, etc. but he evaded his followers, and after thoroughly chewing up three children returned home contented. His owner on hearing of the panic that had been caused gave orders that the dog should be shot, and a number of men undertook to do it. Three shots were fired at him, when he darted away, over a wall seven feet high, and bit four children, some of them so severely that they had to be taken to the hospital. Then he made his way home again and another attempt was made to shoot him, but he resented the warm reception and left for new conquests. Upon a bridge spanning a canal he was met by a man armed with a pitchfork. A sharp tussle ensued, but the man and the pitchfork triumphed; the dead dog was thrown into the canal, and thus ended a four days' terror.

PROOF READING.—If the readers of the newspapers understood one-half of the difficulties in procuring accuracy, instead of wondering and scolding at mistakes, they would be surprised that there are no more. How few appreciate the services of the individual who examines the "proofs" of a paper before it is printed. He is one of the most important agents to the production of a correct literature, and one of whom no reader seems to think. His is the most thankless of all the employments among men. Let him bring out a paper without a fault for weeks and weeks in succession, and nobody thinks of him. But let him allow an error to go uncorrected, and immediately he is known to be censured, and his paper subjected to ill-natured criticisms. He has no thanks for his labored patience, but blame if he is not faultless. He is certain of one or two things—forgetfulness or censure.

IN Connecticut a certain magistrate was called to jail to liberate a worthless debtor.

"Well, John," said the magistrate on entering, "can yon swear that you are not worth twenty dollars, and that you never will be?"

"Why," answered the other, rather chagrined at the question, "I can swear that I am not worth that amount at present."

"Well, well," returned the magistrate, "I can swear the rest, so go along, John."

And the man was sworn and discharged.

A Picture of Real Life.

A farmer, whose cribs were full of corn, was accustomed to pray that the wants of the needy might be supplied; but when any one in needy circumstances asked for a little corn, he said he had none to spare.

One day, after hearing his father pray for the poor and needy, his little son said to him:

"Father, I wish I had your corn."

"Why, my son, what could you do with it?" asked the father.

The child replied, "I would answer your prayers"

AT the examination at a school not far from London, a young tyro in declamation, who had been told by the teacher that he must gesticulate according to the sense, in commencing a piece with "the comet lifts its fiery tale," lifted the tail of his coat to a horizontal position, causing roars of laughter.

IN an editorial on the horse disease the Congregationalist, suggested that it might be as well to sit at the feet of a horse and learn humility.

"Just so," says the California News Letter, "sit down at the hind feet of a mule, and if he don't humiliate you, pull his tail and tickle the inside of his legs with a stable fork."

which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever introduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Soreness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Bellefonte and County.

——Ex-Gov. Curtin is expected home this week.

——The "Commissioners' own" failed to connect last week.

NOTICE TO POULTRY RAISERS—20th of November, Thanksgiving day.

——A Tyrone man advertised for a good study girl. He ought to hunt among the school ma'ams.

——Samuel Gramly is the first and only republican officer elected in this County, on the last decade. He ought to feel highly honored.

——The Centre Hall Reporter wants us to copy its editorials. We would rather publish Mother Goose's Melodies, because they are more sensible.

——Mr. E. M. Leuffer, principal assistant engineer on the L. C. & S. C. railroad located the line of the road, from Lemont to Pa. Furnace.

—The Rebersburg Luth. charge being without a pastor at present, Rev. J. A. Bright, of Aaronsburg, preaches for those congregations, temporarily.

——We understand that Commissioners Hinton and Foster will not be candidates for a second term. Then they will be called "yearlings" we believe.

——Austin Hinton promised a magnificent majority for Mr. Sankey in his own—Snow Shoe—township. Mr. Sankey's majority, there, in figures, was—1.

——The insurance men, who were connected with the late Edwin H. Kinsloe, have in contemplation the erection of a Monument over his grave, as their tribune to his memory.

——The most reliable remedy for Burns and Scalds, is COSMOLINE. It affords the most immediate relief from pain and the wounds heal quickly without leaving any scars.

——Capt. James A. Quigley of Eagleville has sold his store to Messrs. Ligget, Long & Co., of same place. The latter are master hands at the business and will no doubt do their customers justice.

——Fred Kurtz is an ungracious journalist. He hoisted a great rooster in his paper, to crow over the defeat of Sankey, for Commissioner. Never strike a man when he is down Fred, there's always somebody to take it up for him.

——The Watchman says that the "Radical party, in Centre county, has gone up like a rocket and down like a stick." If it did it brought down Mr. Sankey, the only man on the Democratic ticket that the Watchman labored honestly to elect.

——The Centre County Fair ought to have wound up with a gander pulling. —Clinton Republican.

We can have one anytime, if the old geese, who shove their quills for the above paper, will come up and pay their entrance money.

——And now our friend George Weymouth of Lock Haven whom we always admired because of his batchelloric propensities has gone clean back on his record, turned Benedict and married Miss Effie Rote one of the fairest of Clinton County's daughters.

——William Benner who lives near the old Fort, had two horses stolen from him on Monday of last week. We learn that they have been discovered but the thief was not captuued. A horse belonging to Jacob Grove which was stolen on the same night, has not been heard from since.

——The Watchman is continually giving us scoldings. We cannot publish an item that they don't find fault with and vouchsafe some advise. This is all very kind and pleasant for our neighbor to do, but it sort o' seems that they neglect themselves somewhat in paying so much attention to us. We have noticed that people generally thrive when they pay attention to their own business.

——Doctor Stearns, through some mistake of ours, was somewhat misrepresented in the last issue of this paper. His name was inadvertantly connected with an individual who richly deserves the censure he was supposed to have received in the REPUBLICAN. We are glad to have the opportunity of making the amende honorable [and also of adding our testimony to that of many of our citizens who speak most flatteringly of his abilities as a physician.

A SLIGHT IRREGULARITY.—A Bellefonter owns a house, that is he gave the contract to build a large, handsome stone residence, near the Court House. to a well known builder of this place While the new house was building the anticipating owner carefully stored his effects, such as bedding furniture, etc. in one of the vacant rooms in the court house. The mansion grew beautifully during the past summer, and, to handsome proportions gave signs of finish and perfection, one day last week. Every contracter knows the value of that mysterious material used for building purposes, called "extras." This particular structure has a good deal of this stuff in it. More, it seemed, than was contracted for. An attempt at a settlement was about as satisfactory as eating mush and milk out of a bottle with a knitting needle. It was the pursuit of coveted pleasure under a great difficulty. Now ensued an attempt on the part of each to outwit the other in which both succeeded as the sequel will show. One night last week, while the contractor was working through his nocternal dreams, the shrewd party of second part, quickly removed his chattels from the Court House, into his new house, and the morrow's sun found him in peaceful possession of the entire establishment. Before evening he was forcibly reminded that the joys of earth are fleeting. The contractor found that possession of the premises had been taken and that before the settlement had been made, which to his mind was contrary to the act of Assembly. What was done, what to do, a glance told him both, then collecting a posse of workmen he made a raid on the establishment. He was promptly met by his adversary who displayed the most irresistable symptoms of national courage. Then they talked the matter over. Compliments did fly and fists and threats; then the storm bursts, so to speak, in all its varied fury. There was scuffle, a fizgig and then an entrance to the house was effected. Both parties now enraged and each determined to outwit the other. The contractor determined to have a settlement; the aggrieved party claimed damages for failure to perform all the specifications of a twenty-page contract. There was method in the madness of both. The contractor commenced to carry the furniture, and dry-goods out into the street. The landlord threatened to bring every legal action in the calendar against the tresspasser. His threats were violent. But the furniture and fixtures still were carried out. A crowd gathered around the scene and encouraged both parties. When the furniture was laid out, a guard was stationed at the house by the contractor and the other man went to consult his attorney. The contractor did likewise. Then there was considerable legal hob-nobbing. Both parties found that they had the law on their side. A guard was stationed over the furniture and house during the night and, next day it was stored in an adjoining building. Heavy damages are claimed by both sides and an interesting suit is in anticipation at the next term of court.

STILL REMAINING.—We are pleased to announce to the afflicted that Doctor Stearns will remain a few days longer at the Brockerhoff House in this place. We are informed that Mr. Geo. Robb (from whom the Doctor removed a monster tape worm) is doing well, all of his distressing symptoms have passed away. He says he has gained four or five pounds in flesh, and he feels like a new man. This case heretofore baffled the skill of many physicians, and is truly a remarkable cure. We are told that hundreds of persons have called on the Doctor at his rooms for examination and treatment, and all say he describes their diseases with astonishing accuracy without asking questions, which enables him to prescribe the precise remedies to effect a permanent and lasting cure, by the use of vegetable medicines. We are also informed that many of the most obstinate cases have already been cured, and others have been greatly benefitted from his treatment. The effected would do well to avail themselves of the benefit to be derived from his remedies. All wishing consultation should call without delay, as his stay is limited.

——A most disgraceful fight occurred at the depot on Monday afternoon immediately after the Lock Haven passenger train arrived. John Hacket and Thos. I Jones, glass-blowers from Pittsburgh, and some other men had an altercation on the train, and several knock-downs took place before they arrived here. On alighting from the train one of the party drew a pistol on Hacket, who promptly knocked him down and took the pistol from him. After considerble scuffling in which bloody faces, and painful lumps were put on most of them, the by-standers interfeared, and order was restored. No arrest were made.

——A corres pondient sends us an account of a literary entertainment given by the Friend's select school in Half Moon township. Miss Wright, the teacher, is highly spoken of. Readings, essays, and a school paper made a very interesting and enjoyable programme.

——The Watchman has "tape-worm" on the brain—Little luny we suppose.

——C. T. Fryberger and Adam Grim merchants, have dissolved partnership.

——The Agricultural society will hold a meeting in the Court House on Saturday, 25th inst.

——Ex-Gov. Curtin will lecture before the Hermaic Society of Wellsborough on Nov. 25th.

——Autumn, sad but beautiful, now paints the mountains, in the hectic tints of fading. Let her paint.

——Rev. King will be installed as pastor of the Reformed Church in this place on the 26th of this month.

——The buck wheat crop has been a failure in Pennsvalley every year since a paper with a "patent out side" has been published at Centre Hall.

——On last Wednesday, Miss Ann Laurimer and Mrs. Andrew Irwin were thrown from a buggy, and the latter severely injured, caused by the horse scaring and running away.

——Work has been suspended on the L. C. & S. C. Railroad, and laborers and carts passed through town on last Thursday homeward bound. Banks haven't been discounting much lately.

——Charles Smith lately purchased the material and good will of the restaurant formerly owned by Mr. H. H. Stone, and has leased the stand to Geo. Blackford who now keeps an oyster and eating saloon.

——It is said that two Irishmen were standing at the big spring, lately, listening to the noise of the water wheel, when one of them remarked: "Mike, aint this a quare town where they have to grind the water before they can use it?"

——MELANGE.—Jerry Butts is said to be about giving up hoteling.....A. G. Curtin is book-keeper-general at the glass works.....Horse thieves now alarm Centre Co. farmers.....Jas. T. Hale and escort gone to the Buckeye state to take to his bosom a wife. Farewell James.....Col. Wilkinson now hunts fly-up the creeks.....The melancholly days have come, the saddest of the year; the politicians heave a sigh, and "let up" for a year.....Laura" must send us her full name or we will never publish her poem "The last mosquito." Any way we'll wait till they leave our sanctum.....The muscles in the right hand of the politician have weakened.....Moonlight pic-nic in the park on night of election was a delightful jamboree. Speeches, recitations and refreshments made hats too small to wear next day.....Some preachers in this county are not strong political partisans. Right..... The Watchman, speaking of the Evangelical Alliance, says it wants to evangelize. What funny jokes they make about Evangeline..r. It is sad to see a newspaper die without issue.

——The Reporter of last week in commenting on the result of the election makes, as usual, several grave errors. It says the rabble voted for Levi A. Miller, and the intelligent and decent [of the County voted for Mr. Orvis. This is not a correct statement. Levi A. Miller is known all over the county as an honest, industrious man. There can be found no stain on his character. His record, as a citizen and as a member of the republican party, as we stated time and again before the election, is without blemish. That he was forced into accepting the nomination for the Legislature, is well remembered by all. He stated to many prominent republicans, on the day of his nomination, that if there was a man in the party who wanted the nomination he would have withdrawn. In the convention there was no contest. He was nominated by acclamation. Mr. Miller went into the campaign, as he does into every good work, with his whole soul; and if the party had supported him with the same unanimity as was promised him, there would have been a far different result. The wary democracy, with its under-handed chicanery, with its rings, with its wheels within wheels, its contemptible demagogery, succeeded in misleading many of the best men in our party. The result was plain before the election, and, gratifying as it may be to the party in power, it is equally humiliating the party whose exponent he was. Had the full vote of our party been polled, as it was last fall, Mr. Miller would have been triumphantly elected. As it is we have, by the lethargy and disorganization in our own party, lost all the County offices, except one. It was not on account of inability or unworthiness of any of our candidates, but because our vote, in its full strength, was not polled. Let the result of this election teach every republican in the county that no organization can be successful without the hearty co-operation of all its members.

——Where are the police? A fight along the railroad near glass works on Sunday night, another back of Logan St. on Saturday night, and a regular melee on Monday afternoon.

A HORSE THIEF IN TROUBLE.—On last Friday night about two o'clock a man with a jaded looking horse and dust covered buggy drove up to the Butts House in this place and, waking up the landlord, asked for lodging. Mr. Butts had the horse stabled and gave the man accommodations for the rest of the night. In the morning he gave his name as Fox and said he was a horse dealer and that, having to leave town for the east, he was anxious to sell his horse and buggy before the 11 o'clock train arrived. Several parties called to see the rig during the forenoon and to all of them he told the same story. Mr. Abram Baum, a well known horse dealer of this place, called to see Fox about making a purchase, but, upon examining the horse, recognized it as the property of Messrs. Strauss & Co. who kept a livery stable in Osceola. Mr. Baum, who is a man naturally fitted for a detective, set himself to working up the job. He inquired of Fox where he had "come by" the horse and, in reply, Fox said it had been given to his father by some man that he did not know for a bad debt. In answer to an inquiry he said he thought the man lived at Philipsburg, this county. Mr. Baum now felt sure that the horse, buggy and harness had been stolen and immediately set on foot a plan to recover the property and have the thief arrested. After some dickering Mr. Baum agreed to purchase the rig for $165, and told the man to wait a few minutes till he would go and get the money. Instead of getting the money, he went to the telegraph office and sent a message of inquiry to Strauss & Co. who soon replied that the property was stolen and requested him to have Fox arrested and hold the property till they came in. Mr. Baum now went to Policeman Runkle and informed him of the facts and then they both went to the hotel where Fox was waiting to close the bargain. The latter was requested to come "up town" and they would close the transaction. Mr. Runkle followed them at a convenient distance to the office of Justice Irwin, where Mr. Baum asked for a warrant for Fox's arrest. Esq. Irwin asked him if he wanted a hearing and Fox replied "no, I've had hearing enough." He was therefore taken to fort Shaffer where he awaits his trial at the next term of court.

QUEER PROCEEDINGS.—In the heat and excitement of any political campaign, very queer and amusing incidents transpire. Even if they are not treated with the deference they deserve at the time, there are always times, after the storm, when politicians will group together and have their fun over them. Our politicians in this county and in both parties, have a peculiar mein or air about them which comes on as the interest grows and the election day approaches. It is a kind of political uniform they buckle on, for the occasion. Their manner changes just as a Sunday christian's face does on Sabbath morning. You never had such a friend as the candidate is on the eve of election. He will inquire after your children being anxious for their health. He will assure you that any enterprise you have on hand will come out all right and after he is elected what is there that he is not going to do for you. One man we know of received some 400 letters from anticipating constituents asking for money or equivalents and not one of them was turned away empty. They all received a promise. He will squeeze your hand till every knuckle speaks for itself, he calls out good morning to you diagonally from the furthest street corner, he is always just in time to save the little child from being trampled to death by the runaway. He is as prolific of promise as a Sunday School teacher, as confidential as a young lady just engaged, and he assumes to be as common a man as a drum-major in undress uniform. He is eyes to the blind, feet to the lame, money to the poor, whiskey to the inebriate and temperance to the tetotler. He is everything to every body and nothing to nobody besides others. This is the average place hunter. On election day they patrolled the streets like Roman sentries, halting every doubtful passer-by and examining his paper ballet. Contractors told their employees how to vote or what they might expect if they didn't. Merchants voted their clerks, bankers their cubs and mechanics their "jours" Then there was the pull and tug at the polls, the grapple for "floaters." A pound of cut-and-dry or a pint at a flask often bought the right of a free American citizen. Just at the time a man who always made his mark, he could not read either, was handing his ticket up to the window, a bystander asked him to see it and, by a little hokus pokus, handed him back unnoticed another ticket, telling him he was "all right" and the victim knows no better at this writing, and could not be convinced of the deception. We noticed another man who voted in our ward at the exact time an individual was waiting to challenge him in another, and the election board did not detect the fraud. Dozens of men were loudly sounding the praise of one candidate while they were secretly doing their utmost for the other man. There never was such a queer, mixed, cut-up campaign in the county.

One pious man said he could not vote for a certain candidate because he had heard that he "didn't believe in a heaven or a hell, a God or a devil and abused his horse on Sunday." An old Pennsvalley farmer refused to vote for one candidate of his own party because he had heard that the candidate was in favor of electing a county superintendent of Sunday schools, "to ride over the county and visit Sunday schools at $1200, a year."

FOR THE REPUBLICAN.

——The evening of Friday the 31st of this month, has been set apart as the time for a Temperance Convention to be held in Unionville, Centre County, to convene at 6:30 P. M.

The occasion will be the more attractive on account of the presentation of a Prize Banner, won by Old Union, in casting the most unanimous vote against license, at the last Spring Election.

Addresses will be made appropriate to the occasion as well as on the subject of Temperance generally.

Rev. W. T. Wylie, Rev. W. O. Wright and Genl. W. H. Blair, with others from a distance are expected to be in attendance.

(County papers please copy.)

Chairman of Com.,

——And now the matrimonial season is at hand and, as the poet says, "stray leaves from soon-coming orange blossoms flutter around in prophesy of wedding to be." Let 'em flut.

PENNS VALLEY ITEMS FROM THE REPORTER.

—The grain fields in this county have a fine appearance just now.

—There will be a great deal of soft corn in this county, this fall.

—Mr. Thomas Yearick is putting up a new store-room at Aaronsburg, and will soon launch his bark again upon the mercantile business.

—Mr. Tobias, of this place, whose fall from the haymow to the barnfloor of Mr Dinges' barn, we recently mentioned, has not yet been able to walk from the injuries sustained in his hip.

—Mr. James Van Ormer, of Woodward, called at the Reporter office on Tuesday, and we were sorry to learn that he is making arrangements to remove to Illinois in the Spring. This will certainly not suit the people of Woodward and vicinity, for Mr. Van Ormer is a miller who understands his business perfectly, an enterprising public citizen, and socially he is a good fellow. The people of Woodward should keep him in their village, as good millers are not as plenty as the might be. We hope he may be pursuaded to change his mind and remain.

—Some young men, or boys, with more muscle than brains, gave evidence, on Monday night last, that their bump of destructiveness was pretty well developed. Not having received an invitation to a party on Water Street, they showed their smartness by tearing up board walks and piling the lumber on gates, and in the middle of the Street, in such a manner that had any one been compelled to pass during the night or early in the morning, the consequences might have proved serious. A strong effort is being made to find out the perpetrators of the outrage, and, if it is successful, they may find it rather costly sport. We trust they will receive their just dues.

—On last Monday morning about break of day, a horse belonging to Mr. George Swab, near Linden Hall, fell down a well, a distance of some 24 feet. The horse broke through the plank and went down butt foremost. There were some ten feet of water in the well at the time, and Mr. Swab's other horses stood around the well, looking on as their companion made his exit from terra firma, and they seemed to be much alarmed at the sudden disappearance of one of their number, wondering, perhaps, whether he had a through ticket for China. The groans of the unfortunate animal in its watery dilemma were heard by Mr. Swab in the house, and on going out to see what was up, found that one of his horses was "down" as above stated. Neighbors to the number of twenty soon hurried to the scene of trouble, and by means of ropes and belts the animal was pulled out of its close ant wet quarters, having sustained some cuts and bruises, but none of a nature to render the horse unserviceable.

MARRIED.

At Jacksonville, Oct. 16, by Rev. U. W Condit, Mr. Benjmin F. Cormen and Miss Mary Elizabeth Beck, both of Jacksonville.

In Millheim, on the 1st inst., by J. H. Reifsnyder, Esq., William Derr and Miss Clara Willow, both of Millheim.

On the 2d inst. at the residence of the bride's parents, Laurel Run, by the Rev. J. Gray, Mr. Robert Askey and Miss Wilhelmina Forcey.

DIED.

In Millheim, on the 11th inst., Mrs. Elizabeth Wife of Samuel Weiser, aged 65 years 8 months and 3 days.

In Haines Township, on the 10th inst., Peter Snyder, aged 71 years, 10 mos. and 24 days.

FOUND AT LAST!—A remedy that not only relieves, but cures that enemy of mankind, Consumption, as well as the numerous satellites which revolves around it in the shape of coughs, colds, bronchitis, sore throat, influenza, &c. The remedy we allude to is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of wild cherry, prepared by Seth W. Fowle & Sons, Boston.

JOHNSON'S CLOCK SPRING ROLLER FOR WINDOW SHADES Should be introduced into every household. They are very complete, and obviate the necessity of having cords. Diploma awarded at all the principal County Fairs. Call and examine them at JOHNSTON'S Wall paper and Window Shade Depot, 1033 Spring Garden St., Philadelphia.

HOW TO LIGHTEN WOMAN'S LABOR. If "time is money," then everything that tends to facilitate labor is a positive pecuniary benefit to mankind. The best sewing machine or churn is not a "good strong woman," as experience proves. So Sapolio, enabling one woman to easily do as much cleaning of every kind in one day as two women can do in two days with the scrubbing brush and soap, is a positive blessing to the human race. No woman who has once used it will ever use anything else as a substitute. Sold by all dealers. The cheapest as well as best cleansing substance in the world.

TO THE CITIZENS OF PENNSYLVANIA.—Your attention is specially invited to the fact that the National Banks are now prepared to receive subscription to the Capital Stock of the Centennial Board of Finance. The funds realized from this source are to be employed in the erection of the buildings for the International Exhibition, and the expenses connected with the same. It is confidently believed that the Keystone State will be represented by the name of every citizen alive to patriotic commemoration of the one hundred birth-day of the nation. The shares of stock are offered for $10 each, and subscribers will receive a handsomely steel engraved Certificate of Stock, suitable for framing and preservation as a national memorial.

Interest at the rate of six per cent per annum will be paid on all payments of Centennial Stock from date of payment to January 1, 1876.

Subscribers who are not near a National Bank can remit a check or post-office order to the undersigned.

Centaur Liniment

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings, caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. They are counter-irritant, all-healing pain relievet. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are endered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. The recipe is published around each bottle. They sell as no articles ever before sold, and they sell because they do just what they pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—these liniments are worth your attention. No family should be without them. "White wrapper for family use;" Yellow wrapper for animals.
